The Stolen March

Gregory Benford suffered a severe stroke on 22 December, as reported by his brother Jim in February. After several weeks in hospital he was transferred to rehabilitation; further progress reports are awaited and many fingers are crossed in hope of a full recovery. [F770]

Mr Blobby, that icon of 1990s tv, was critically transfigured in The New Statesman: 'A later Blobby, Paul Denson, pointed out to Vice that "when you're in the suit you are essentially blind". The temptation then to read Blobby as a Nineties incarnation of Milton's sightless and raging Samson Agonistes is hard to resist.' (Stuart Maconie, NS, 2 February) [PE]

Neil Clarke of Clarkesworld magazine posted a bar chart showing the recent sharp increase in 'the number of people we've had to ban over plagiarism and machine-written spam submissions': lowish from 2020 to Autumn 2022, then around 50 in December, over 100 in January and nearly 350 by mid-February. '38% of our February submissions are spammy.' (Neil-clarke.com, 15 February) Submissions were closed on 20 February when the month's count passed 500 with over 50 more per day. Extensive media coverage of this story may have brought some small compensation in the form of publicity.... (Guardian, 21 February) Other magazines reporting the same problem include Asimov's and F&SF.

Roald Dahl was in the news after an agreement between his estate and Puffin to bowdlerize his children's books even more. No one can now be described as fat, and so on. Perhaps the weirdest edit had the book-loving heroine of Matilda reading more 'acceptable' authors, with Joseph Conrad and Rudyard Kipling becoming Jane Austen and John Steinbeck, though in the same list Ernest Hemingway mysteriously survived. Literary figures took sides – 'absurd censorship', said Salman Rushdie, while unworldly Philip Pullman suggested that these reliable cash cows should be quietly let go out of print – and the mass media had a great deal of fun being outraged, or otherwise. (BBC, Daily Mail, Guardian, Independent, Radio 4, Telegraph, etc. etc.) The eventual lucrative compromise is that Puffin will publish both 'classic' and revised versions of the sacred texts.

Oghenechovwe Donald Ekpeki flew into Los Angeles for the NAACP Image Awards ceremony but was detained incommunicado for three days and then sent back to Nigeria in spite of his two-year US visa. Though the rules reportedly require a six-month gap between visits, Ekpeki angrily insists there's more to it than that: 'I'll just say it's way worse than anyone says or thinks'. Court Circular. Middle-earth Enterprises has once again put forth its power against the forces of darkness – this time, a two-man rubbish clearance outfit in Brighton that called itself 'The Lord of the Bins'. Both the name and the company slogan 'One ring to remove it all' are frowned on by m'learned friends as 'highly similar to the Lord of the Rings' and 'an infringement of our client's trademark rights'. (Guardian, 4 February) Which will not be challenged in court because the bin men can't afford it.

Scientific Units Redux. 'A meteor around the size of a Pembroke Welsh Corgi and weighing around the total weight of four baby elephants struck the Earth near McAllen, Texas last Wednesday, NASA confirmed this week.' (Aaron Reich, Jerusalem Post, 21 February)

Our New Fungal Overlords. 'Other researchers have set slime mould loose on tiny scale-models of Tokyo with food placed at the major hubs (in a single day they reproduced the form of the subway system) and on maps of Ikea (they found the exit, more efficiently than the scientists who set the task).' (London Review of Books, May 2021)

Random Fandom. FAAn Awards: a final reminder that voting for fanzine-related work published in 2022 closes on 10 March. Read all about it at efanzines.com/TIR/Incompleat2022.pdf. ● Crossword Corner: 'Nice if conceits can be turned into a literary genre (7, 7).' (i)

Publishers and Sinners. Twenty Terry Pratchett sf and fantasy stories written under pseudonyms (mainly 'Patrick Kearns') for the Western Daily Press in the 1970s and 1980s have come to light and will be collected in a book to appear later this year. (Guardian, 27 February)

Outraged Letters. Jerry Kaufman: 'Suzle and I laughed at your remarks about The Spanish Inquisition and "The Fannish Inquisition"'. [See A427.] I don't think Spaninq would be dropped from listings or websites, but I can see being asked to retroactively change the name. In case that happens, I've picked Otherwise Astounding.' (2 February)

The Dead Past. 30 Years Ago, a peep into Selected Letters of Philip K. Dick, volume 4: 'Tim Powers's introduction tells how PKD found he had the power to forgive sins: "How many people have you absolved?" "Well, none, Powers. Today I've decided I was mistaken, and yesterday you weren't home, and when I called Jeter he got huffy and said he didn't want his sins forgiven.... So I just forgave my cats' sins."' (Ansible 68, March 1993) ● 20 Years Ago, a perhaps unfortunate turn of phrase: 'Supernatural thriller writer Doug Clegg has been known as an innovator. In order to bring attention to himself and try to bore a solid core of genre fans, he became one of the first ever to give an e-book away for free on the Internet. (PWDaily)' (Ansible 188, March 2003) ● 10 Years Ago: 'Christopher Tolkien, not a man for talking to the press, granted his first ever interview to Le Monde last year; a translation later appeared online. "They eviscerated [The Lord of the Rings] by making it an action movie for young people aged 15 to 25," he complained. "Tolkien has become a monster, devoured by his own popularity and absorbed into the absurdity of our time. The chasm between the beauty and seriousness of the work, and what it has become, has overwhelmed me. The commercialization has reduced the aesthetic and philosophical impact of the creation to nothing. There is only one solution for me: to turn my head away." Le Monde added: "Invited to meet Peter Jackson, the Tolkien family preferred not to."' (Ansible 308, March 2013)

Fanfunder. European Fan Fund voting continues until 10 April; see fandomrover.com/2023/02/02/eff-race-begins/. ● TAFF voting continues to 11 April at taff.org.uk/vote.php. Further free ebooks are Colonial Excursion by Ron Bennett (1958 TAFF trip report) and The Harp in England by Walt Willis (reports on 1950s UK cons, plus one in 1976). See all the ebooks at taff.org.uk/ebooks.php?all. Future TAFF projects include paperback collections of all Ted White's 1969-1979 editorials for Amazing and Fantastic, with new introductions by Mike Ashley and Ted respectively.

Another Site Gone. Ralan.com, the sf magazine market information resource founded on 5 December 1996, went dark this year: 'This website is now closed. / To all who have sent in tips over the last 26 years & 57 days, my gracious thanks. Good luck to you all.' [BK]

Repo Man Redux. Ford has filed a patent 'for embedded vehicle systems that facilitate an automobile's repossession, including autonomously moving it to a repossession agency.' (The Register, 28 February)

'Unverified.' UK author Sylvia Waugh – born 1935, best known for her children's fantasies opening with The Mennymys (1993) – was reported in Wikipedia to have died on 6 March 2022; this claim was removed in February 2023 by an editor who could find no verification. [PW] Her son Peter Waugh has since taken responsibility for the death report, but a close relative is not regarded by Wikipedia as a reliable source.
